Diversified Theological Education Equipping All God's People Edited by Ross Kinsler

The central concern of Diversified Theological Education, which includes Theological Education by Extension, is access. TEE and DTE models have made enormous progress in the urgent task of opening access to and equipping all God's people for ministry and mission. This has many interrelated dimensions: Geographical, economic, cultural, ecclesiastical, gender, race, class, pedagogical, and spiritual access. The case studies in this anthology come from Zambia, South Africa, Ghana, India, Nepal, Australia, Costa Rica, Argentina, Guatemala, Canada, United States, and Russia.

“One of the most creative and widespread movements of theological education in our time has been called Theological Education by Extension. . . . The case studies offered here demonstrate ongoing creativity, so much so that a new name is proposed in the title for this anthology: Diversified Theological Education.” — From the Foreword by Archbishop Desmond Tutu

“This book will be of great interest to all those involved in theological education around the world. It has to do with the relentless quest for the relevance of theological education to the mission of the church in the contemporary world.” — Aharon Sapsejian, former Director of the World Council of Churches' Programme on Theological Education

“Testimonies recorded in this book show how TEE/DTE equips God's people for God's mission in the face of globalization and new forms of empire.” — Kangwa Mabuluki, Secretary, All Africa Theological Education by Extension Association

ROSS KINSLER was part of the team that developed TEE in Guatemala in the early 1960s. Then he joined the staff of the Programme on Theological Education of the WCC, where he was able to follow the global development of TEE, which he documented in the 1983 publication of Ministry by the People: Theological Education by Extension. Later he joined the faculty of the Latin American Biblical University in Costa Rica, which is included in this anthology. He now lives in Southern California, USA.
